Dear Friends and Supporters,

Since 1960, Samaritan Daytop Village has empowered individuals and families to move from cycles of crisis to long-term stability, independence, and success.

Our work is rooted in a simple belief: good things happen when people receive comprehensive and integrated care to address all their needs. Equally important, over the decades, our efforts have evolved to fill gaps in care to meet the changing challenges faced by New Yorkers.

In 2025, we continued to strengthen our model across the Downstate New York region. We expanded support in shelters and housing settings, deepened recovery and wellness services, and advanced the construction of Highbridge, our transformative affordable, supportive, and transitional housing development in the Bronx. As a result, across all our programs, we are helping more people build better lives and brighter futures.

This work would not be possible without the commitment of our staff, the partnership of our funders and community allies, and the generosity of supporters who believe in our mission. Thank you for standing with us. Together, we are investing in people and communities to create a stronger future for New York.

Amber's story

Amber, 38, came to one of our shelters a few years ago after experiencing housing instability. We saw her other life challenges. Our team encouraged Amber to address her physical and mental health and substance use, but she was withdrawn and resistant. Over many months we built trust and she started to take small steps, first visiting our Richard Pruss Wellness Center for primary care, then adding outpatient behavioral health support, and substance use recovery services. At first, she attended programs only once a week, but with support from peer advocates she now comes five days a week to see clinicians, participate in group programs, take part in our Creative Arts program, and search for work. And, she is one step closer to getting her own apartment and reuniting with her son, two of her biggest goals.

2025 Year

Celebrating 65 Years

For 65 years, Samaritan Daytop Village has been the place “Where Good Lives” because we grow and adapt to the changing needs of New Yorkers facing adversity. What began with one program in Queens has expanded into a nationally recognized human services organization that serves as a model for delivering comprehensive care and successfully supporting people in their recovery journey. ▼

◀ Our army of 40 peer outreach workers helped reduce overdose deaths in New York City by 28% between '23 and '24 by providing harm reduction kits and encouraging people to start their recovery.

in Review

Highbridge development marked a major milestone with the topping off of the structure, which is being completed ahead of schedule and on budget. When complete, Highbridge will bring 422 units of affordable, supportive, and transitional housing to the Bronx, alongside community and outdoor space, on-site social services, and 100 full time jobs. ▼

▲ The first cohort of our SOLAR program graduated with their social work degrees from Stony Brook University and joined the workforce, filling a workforce shortage.

▲ To bring a little joy to families experiencing homelessness, we broke ground on the Binky's Backyard playground at our Gloria's House shelter.

Good Happens When

At Samaritan Daytop Village, care is integrated at every level and across all our housing, health, and recovery programs, because that is what people need. Mental health, physical health, and substance use are deeply linked. Housing instability, hunger, unemployment, and trauma make it harder for someone to recover or move forward. People do better when those challenges and needs are addressed together.

That is why our model brings services together, instead of forcing people to navigate disconnected systems. In our shelters, housing programs, outpatient and residential recovery and treatment centers, health center, and community-based programs, we work to ensure that each person can access the support they need in a coordinated way.

We know recovery is personal, nonlinear, and possible, and we meet people where they are with dignity, compassion, and comprehensive support.

Debbie's story

When Debbie, 62, decided she needed to make a change in her life, she walked into one of our outpatient recovery clinics. Staff recognized that Debbie's housing instability would be a huge barrier to addressing her substance use, so they connected her first with a shelter and then helped her secure a permanent home. She continues to use outpatient recovery services where she gets more than treatment; she gets nutritious food, takes classes, and uses the computer lab to advance her work skills. She also began a Peer Advocate training program. Debbie says we helped her build stability and a future, "They got everything," she said. "You ask, and they give. To me, Samaritan Village is a healing place."

Care is Integrated

Caring for Our Veterans

Samaritan Daytop Village has long been recognized for its pioneering veteran-specific recovery services and continues to build on that model today, serving 421 veterans struggling with PTSD and other mental health challenges and substance use. Run by veterans, our programs deliver all the support members of our armed services need. ▼

Supporting Moms & Dads & Tending to Kids

We want to end cycles of homelessness, substance use, and trauma. Our unique program for pregnant and parenting women ensures that mothers can recover while maintaining critical bonds with their children. Our counseling programs help build family unity. And, our shelters focus on helping children succeed in school and parents build economic stability.

Housing: The Basic Building Block to a Good Life

Housing is foundational to recovery, health, and economic mobility because it creates the stability people need to focus on healing and moving forward. Samaritan Daytop Village is one of the city's largest shelter providers and is increasingly helping address the housing crisis by building affordable and supportive housing.

Each year we celebrate the veterans who have achieved a sobriety milestone. ABC's Bob Woodruff joined the celebration in 2025.

Give Support!

Samaritan Daytop Foundation was created in 1979 as the fundraising, housing development, and real estate arm of Samaritan Daytop Village. Its goal is to raise critical funds to help expand the vast array of Samaritan Daytop Village and Health programs and services. Through the generosity of individual donors, businesses, and community partners, Samaritan Daytop Foundation invests in people, programs, and possibilities. Financial and in-kind contributions help bring innovative services to life, strengthen existing programs, and ensure that Samaritan Daytop Village and Health clients receive the care, support, and opportunities they need to thrive.
